

ARIZONA COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

annual report 2022

“During the last 13 years, Steve Seleznow’s shared commitment to improving lives for all who call Arizona home and his collaboration and leadership in the nonprofit sector have helped inspire a greater sense of community. He has positioned ACF for years of future success.”

ROBBIN M. COULON, ESQ.
ACF Board Chair

DEAR DONORS, PARTNERS, AND FRIENDS—

As we discover our new normal, it only seems right to reflect on our past.

Our history reminds us of where we came from and calls upon us—wherever we are—to create change. In another year of tremendous transformation for our state, our nation, and our world, the Arizona Community Foundation responded to urgent needs and addressed some of Arizona's greatest challenges.

For 44 years, ACF has worked to mobilize local philanthropy to improve lives, support fair and equitable access to resources, and respond compassionately to community needs. Last year was no exception.

What will change in the next year is the departure of our President and CEO Steve Seleznow, a stalwart community leader for the past 13 years. When Steve departs in March 2023, he will leave behind an organizational commitment to stewardship, collaboration, and leadership, which will live on at ACF for years to come.

During his tenure, the organization's assets under management have grown from $468 million in 2010 to more than $1.4 billion in 2022. A large-scale technology transition was completed in 2021, replacing all legacy systems with best-in-class technology. This transformation enabled ACF to improve overall operating performance and allowed the organization to better serve its donors and the community at large.

Under Steve's leadership, ACF built its first endowment for the arts, invested $28.2 million in recyclable capital through our impact loan programs, created the New Arizona Prize with five philanthropic competitions addressing some of Arizona's most vexing problems and pressing needs, developed robust services to facilitate corporate philanthropy, and expanded the scope of philanthropy for all, among other innovative donor engagement initiatives.

Our investment in the community continues to expand. In collaboration with our donors and partners, ACF distributed more than $145 million across Arizona and its diverse communities last year. Our staff met this challenge head-on, distributing 7,435 grants and scholarships while continuing to work remotely in alignment with COVID-19 safety protocols.

Through this leadership transition, ACF remains committed to you, our partners, who constantly inspire us with your generosity and resolve. We continue to work with donors, community and business leaders, government officials, and nonprofit organizations across Arizona who are collectively seeking to create better, safer, more prosperous communities.

This annual report pays tribute to our history and Steve's leadership with an eye toward the many changes and opportunities that await us. We strongly value the opportunity to work alongside you as we endeavor to live out our mission to create a better Arizona, one that honors the experiences, wisdom, and aspirations of all residents.

We share these stories in gratitude and admiration. Thank you for your continued support.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, reading "Robbin Coulon". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a long horizontal line extending from the end of the name.

*We believe in the transformative power of partnerships around shared passions and objectives.
We encourage and celebrate teamwork, pooling of resources, open communication, and trust.*

Our Core Values define who we are and how we operate.

These seven guiding principles align with our mission to lead, serve, and collaborate to mobilize enduring philanthropy for a better Arizona.

Our mission and values enable us to serve communities across our state by creating a strong culture of philanthropy that builds generation upon generation.

NIMBLENESS

We responded rapidly to climate disasters, war, and terrorist acts, providing our donors with on-the-ground options to support impacted communities. We adapted to another uncertain year with virtual programming that brought communities together.

EXCEPTIONAL SERVICE

We worked closely with donors and partners to distribute a record number of grants, scholarships, and loans. We made several key hires that will allow us to better serve our communities as we prepare for our CEO transition.

COLLABORATION

We encouraged collaboration through our fourth New Arizona Prize, focusing on housing security and awarding $250,000 to Tempe Community Action Agency, AZCEND, and Aster Aging to lay the groundwork for the East Valley Senior Home Sharing Program.

INTEGRITY

We continued to examine our process for discretionary grants, inviting new partners to the table as we adjusted our grantmaking practices.

STEWARDSHIP

Our upgraded technology allowed us to be more efficient and effective in all of our financial processes. We took extra precautions as cybersecurity and bank fraud were on the rise.

INNOVATION

We began a two-year website redesign project that will launch this fall and made continued improvements to our ACF Connect donor portal to better serve our fundholders.

INCLUSION

We continued to look inward on our organizational journey to incorporate diversity, equity, and inclusion into our business practices. We currently have the most racially, culturally, and ethnically diverse board and staff in our history.

In 2014, ACF, The Arizona Republic, and the Morrison Institute for Public Policy partnered to create the New Arizona Prize—a philanthropic initiative intended to create the Arizona of tomorrow, a place where innovation thrives, where ingenuity is supported, and where the best thinking is harnessed to create long-term solutions to persistent needs. Today, $850,000 has been awarded, with $300,000 more in the pipeline to award in 2023. Total impact: $1.15 million.

and kiosks along the trails

Individuals and families flock to Arizona for its unmatched and diverse outdoor beauty. The state is home to vast deserts, the largest ponderosa pine forest in the world, iconic waterfalls and lakes, and mountain ranges peaking well over 10,000 feet above sea level.

Making these outdoor spaces accessible to the public is no small feat and requires collaboration between federal, state, and local entities, as well as the expertise and dedication of nonprofits and volunteers. The funding available to protect and preserve the recreational spaces often can't keep up with the demands of the 21st century, and the looming climate crisis has brought environmental stewardship front and center to any conversation surrounding the outdoors.

As a component fund of the Arizona Community Foundation, the Desperados Trail Scouts is one of many groups that admires and advocates for Arizona's natural beauty. Made up of action-oriented volunteers, the Desperados work to protect, promote, and enhance the landscape that borders the Tonto Skyline—the mountains rising behind the homes of Desert Mountain. In addition to supporting the Desert Mountain community, the Desperados support regional organizations that include Friends of the Tonto National Forest, Arizona Trail Association, Arizona Game and Fish, Cave Creek Museum, International Dark Skies, Quiet Parks International, Desert Foothills Mountain Biking Association, and more.

This past year, the group provided $10,000 to Friends of the Tonto National Forest to help improve trail signage and trailhead kiosks for the 35-mile Cave Creek trail system.

"Many of the trails in the Cave Creek area were in disarray and not maintained, making it hard for recreationalists to navigate their way around," said Troy Gillenwater, a Desperados Trail Scout. "With better signage, we believe more people will get out there and use the trails, while decreasing the likelihood of people getting lost."

The donation from Desperados inspired the Tonto National Forest Cave Creek Ranger District to apply for funds made available through the Great America Outdoors Act, a piece of conservation legislation that provides needed maintenance for facilities and infrastructure in national parks, forests, wildlife refuges, recreation areas, and American Indian schools. Funding was secured in the spring of 2022 to pay for backcountry crews to perform heavy trail brushing and sign installation.

The impact of this funding extends beyond the trails and into the lives of environmentally-minded community members. "Friends of the Tonto National Forest informs and involves local communities in discovering, playing in, loving, and learning how our individual talents can benefit the forests," said Patti Fenner, Executive Director of the organization. "Community members who volunteer not only develop ties to the land, but also with one another."

Hikers, runners, bikers, and horseback riders will be able to navigate the trails more confidently now that the trail junctions are clearly marked with new fiberglass trail markers.

KELLENBERGER + TOLLEFSON CENTER FOR LGBTQ PHILANTHROPY

 Longtime philanthropists Richard Tollefson and Marc Kellenberger added their names to ACF's Center for LGBTQ Philanthropy in February 2020.

MISSION: The Kellenberger + Tollefson Center for LGBTQ Philanthropy contributes to an Arizona and society that advance justice and opportunity for LGBTQ people and communities where they live.

The Arizona Community Foundation first demonstrated its commitment to causes for lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, and questioning communities through a dedicated fund in the early 2000s. The Center for LGBTQ Philanthropy was established in 2013 and renamed in February 2020 in honor of longtime philanthropists and community leaders, Marc Kellenberger and Richard Tollefson. The largest naming gift for an ACF Center to date, this gift secured the Kellenberger + Tollefson Center's place as one of the first named centers for LGBTQ philanthropy in the U.S.

"Marc's unwavering commitment and leadership—for over 20 years—have been the consistent force behind conceptualizing, starting, and expanding the center. He is to be commended for his vision and persistence," said Richard Tollefson.

Marc Kellenberger added: "Richard and I are proud to help lead this effort to position ACF's Kellenberger + Tollefson Center as a leader in the LGBTQIA community in Arizona and nationwide. We invite others to join our movement."

Since 2005, the Kellenberger + Tollefson Center and preceding funds have awarded more than $870,000 in grants and scholarships to community organizations and students. Because of these investments, the center was named one of the top 10 funders of non-discrimination protections by the national network of Funders for LGBTQ Issues.

The center's top priority is to encourage philanthropic investment by and for the LGBTQ community in Arizona, strengthening LGBTQ-related nonprofit organizations and achieving positive, sustainable, transformational change for LGBTQ people throughout the state. The Kellenberger + Tollefson Center has developed a new model for fundraising, grantmaking, and convening with the hope that this innovative model will be replicated by other community foundations nationwide, enhancing the lives of LGBTQ people in communities across the nation.

In 2022, that work is showing results. Through innovative partnerships and a renewed focus, the LGBTQ Leaders Impact Fund brought together 52 donors and raised more than $200,000 over the course of two years.

Thanks to the generosity of Arizona's LGBTQ community, the Kellenberger + Tollefson Center awarded nearly $250,000 in grants during its most recent competitive grant cycle, supporting organizations that serve LGBTQ youth, seniors, and transgender people across the state. This is the largest single-year investment in the history of LGBTQ giving at ACF and demonstrates what can be accomplished when communities come together to create collective impact.

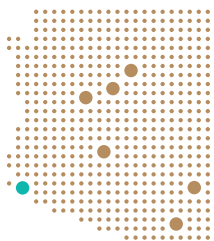

The Kellenberger + Tollefson Center Advisory Council involves up to 17 members of the LGBTQ community.

Total charitable assets managed by ACF regional offices have grown to nearly $172 million in 2022, funding grants to all 15 Arizona counties.

Known as “The Sunniest City on Earth,” Yuma sits where sunshine and warm weather are promised for more than 330 days each year. Because of this, many are surprised to learn of the city’s agricultural output. In fact, the land surrounding Yuma produces around 90% of all leafy vegetables in the United States from November to March.

Agriculture is the primary industry in Yuma County. And now more than ever, there is a growing need for individuals to work in the field. Jobs include soil and plant scientists, field engineers, field workers, conservation planners, sales managers, and farm workers.

The Marion F. Griffin Memorial Agriculture Scholarship Fund provides Yuma County students with the opportunity to pursue an agriculture industry-based education at the University of Arizona. Since being established at the Arizona Community Foundation of Yuma in 2008, the fund has distributed over $328,750 to more than 50 local students.

Esther Lopez was a member of the Antelope chapter of Future Farmers of America and is one of the many students who received scholarships from the fund. Thanks to her scholarship, Esther was able to graduate with a degree in Agriculture Tech Management with an emphasis in leadership and communications.

“I graduated from UArizona in May with a Bachelor of Science. I still have a deep passion for the outdoors and sustainable agriculture,” said Esther. “The financial support allowed me to pursue my degree while leaving extra time to meet new people, take on leadership positions, and finally find a job that I enjoy. I am extremely thankful for that.”

The Marion F. Griffin Memorial Agriculture Scholarship expands educational opportunities for Yuma-area students in an industry that is integral to maintaining the economic viability of the region.

REAL ESTATE CREATES REAL IMPACT

GIVING COMPLEX ASSETS

Charitable contributions of complex or non-cash assets have gained momentum in recent years as tax advantages have grown.

The Arizona Community Foundation differentiates itself from other philanthropic organizations by serving our donors with care and expertise, even when it comes to more complex charitable gifts. There is no better example than Christy and Daryl Burton who contributed $137.6 million in real estate assets to their ACF supporting organization in October 2021. The Burton Family Foundation real estate gift was the largest ACF had received in its 44-year history.

This latest contribution is in addition to an original $25 million gift, also made using the transfer of real estate assets, which established the Burton Family Foundation in 2015. Since then, the Burtons have often partnered with ACF to leverage their grantmaking and co-fund critical programs and projects that align with their charitable interests.

As the Burtons developed their strategy for a significant business transaction related to their company's real estate holdings, Daryl and Christy considered how the transaction could be used to advance their philanthropic impact and engaged ACF to achieve these dual goals.

"Working closely with Christy and Daryl has been a privilege," said Steve Seleznow, ACF President & CEO. "Supporting the Burtons by customizing their family foundation in alignment with their charitable goals and vision has been rewarding for all of us. They have created a truly amazing legacy for Arizona."

The Burtons focus on flexibility, innovation, and an entrepreneurial approach to grantmaking. By leveraging partnerships with other foundations and funders, Daryl and Christy invest in smaller education programs and organizations that have a proven track record, but require additional investments to increase their reach and impact more students in more locations.

"Our partnership with ACF has enabled the Burton Family Foundation to reach hundreds of students and grantees working passionately to make Arizona a better place for all," said Christy.

Bringing multiple voices and perspectives to the table is the best way to solve community problems and take full advantage of emerging opportunities. At ACF, our cultural giving initiatives engage diverse communities in addressing relevant needs. Since 2005, the Philanthropy for All initiatives, giving circles, and stakeholders have collectively raised more than $3 million and distributed more than $1.5 million to projects and programs that impact Black, Asian, Latino, Native American, and LGBTQ communities.

KITCHELL EMPLOYEE GIVING PROGRAM

B.A. GOLSTON & JULIE GARCIA

Since 1950, the Kitchell Corporation has been committed to community service. The Arizona-based company incentivizes volunteerism, fundraising for nonprofits, and employee match contributions from the Kitchell Foundation Fund—an employee giving program administered by the Arizona Community Foundation’s Pakis Center for Business Philanthropy.

“Kitchell’s employee matching program is one way we continue to live the value of community service instilled by Sam Kitchell that holds steadfast within each of our employee-owners today,” said CEO Jim Swanson. “It is an attitude of caring, helping neighbors in times of need, and simply doing what is right without reward.”

Employees take full advantage of this opportunity. Vice President Julie Garcia has worked for Kitchell since the early 2000s, a connection that predates her marriage and the birth of her four children. She gives regularly to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation and believes that through the employee matching program, “Kitchell is saying that they support me and where I choose to impact my community. That shows me it matters that we give and are generous with our profits and that is a culture I want to be part of.”

Diagnosed with juvenile diabetes in her youth, Julie is personally motivated by JDRF’s mission to find a cure for Type 1 Diabetes. “This disease impacts not only the person who has it, but everyone with whom that person interacts, including family, friends, and coworkers. Sometimes the impact can be traumatic. So, for me and everyone else who is affected by it, I want a cure!”

Kitchell’s support for employee giving also inspired Senior Project Manager B.A. Golston, who makes regular gifts to New Pathways for Youth, a holistic mentorship program serving metro Phoenix youth who are experiencing poverty.

“I became a mentor at New Pathways for Youth after receiving a Kitchell companywide email asking for volunteers. I joined not really knowing what to expect, nor understanding how I could make a difference,” said B.A. “New Pathways for Youth made me a proud believer in the importance of change and the value of mentoring.”

For employee-owners like Julie and B.A., Kitchell’s promise to them and commitment to serve communities in Arizona, California, and Texas goes beyond lip service and sets an example of generosity and corporate stewardship for other businesses to follow.

MOBILIZING PHILANTHROPY IN THE SONORAN DESERT

The unique ways
ACF enables donors to connect with each other and nonprofit organizations drives charitable

The Arizona Community Foundation has a rich history of providing opportunities for donors to build deeper knowledge about the people and communities who are supported through their grantmaking. So, when ACF donors Ed Eisele and David and Weezie Reese approached ACF President & CEO Steve Seleznow to learn more about the impact of the wall on the environment and about the organizations that were working with migrants on both sides of the Arizona-Mexico border, Steve mobilized the ACF team to organize a trip with the donors.

Angie Laskarides, ACF Senior Regional Director, helped coordinate a visit to Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument south of Ajo where Ed and David could see the environmental impact within Arizona. Angie connected the group with the International Sonoran Desert Alliance, a comprehensive community development nonprofit that is committed to growing resilient and sustainable Sonoran Desert communities.

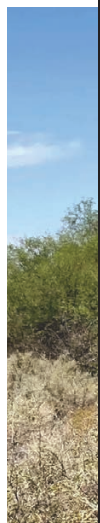

"Our aim is for donors to have the deepest philanthropic experience they can have," said Steve. "Because we work with many organizations and donors, each of whom have their own unique charitable interests, we are able to build connections that other organizations cannot."

And that's exactly what happened in this case. After the Organ Pipe trip, Ed, David, and Weezie were interested in learning more about work being done in Mexico. That's when Steve and Angie connected them with ACF donors Jim and Jo-Ann Armstrong and Gil Gillenwater, founders and longtime supporters of Rancho Feliz, a nonprofit organization operating in Agua Prieta, Mexico.

In Agua Prieta, ACF donors and staff met with migrants who had crossed the border but were sent back to Mexico by the U.S. Border Patrol and with former 'coyotes' who had transported many migrants north. Angie said the trips were heartbreaking but eye-opening: "We heard the stories of why they tried to cross, and what their plans were. And we're just sitting there, crying, as they're telling us their stories. I still think about them: Are they one of the people who have died trying? Have they made it? These are human beings I hugged and talked with."

"Having deeper knowledge about the things you care about is at the heart of philanthropy," said Steve. "It's about demonstrating love for your fellow man. To do that well, you have to be knowledgeable and, when possible, immerse yourself in the causes you care about and understand the humanity that often gets overlooked when issues are controversial. That's exactly what Ed Eisele and David and Weezie Reese did, and it's what ACF is here to facilitate."

Finding affordable housing options in Flagstaff and northern Arizona has become increasingly challenging. Compounding factors have made housing prices skyrocket in recent years.

Problems as vast and complex as affordable housing often see heated debate from both sides of the political aisle. But the Arizona Community Foundation of Flagstaff has begun to tackle this difficult issue through collaboration with a group of community-minded businesses, nonprofits, and individuals who are committed to addressing northern Arizona's affordable housing crisis.

The Northern Arizona Housing Fund is a dedicated and sustainable funding source that distributes money to organizations that build affordable homes and administer programs to help low- and moderate-income northern Arizona families attain housing. Beyond direct donations to the fund from individuals and businesses; realtors, brokers, homebuilders, title companies, and even buyers and sellers, have the opportunity to easily donate to the fund every time a home is sold. This idea was inspired by ACF donor Howard Epstein who established the model through the Arizona Housing Fund in 2019.

In its inaugural year of grantmaking, the Northern Arizona Housing Fund distributed nearly $70,000 to organizations such as Red Feather Development Group, Housing Solutions of Northern Arizona, Inc., ANEW Living, Flagstaff Shelter Services, Sunshine Rescue Mission-Hope Cottage, and Habitat for Humanity of Northern Arizona.

"This is an amazing and critical resource to provide affordable housing options for households in Coconino County," said Devonna McLaughlin, CEO of Housing Solutions of Northern Arizona. "We are thrilled to be able to use these funds to help first-time homebuyers open the door to homeownership in our community and put down roots. Our hope is that this will lead to greater housing stability and will enable local households to build wealth."

'DOCTORS LIKE ME': PATHWAY PIPELINE PRODUCES SCHOLARS

KAMI SOLTERO
Class of 2022 UArizona Pathway Scholar

ACF's Ellis Center for Educational Excellence made a three-year commitment to provide $306,000 in grants to nine Native American students through the Pathway Scholars Program. The funds will support three medical school students per year for three years.

Growing up in rural Arizona, it was hard for many to imagine Kami Soltero following through with her dream of being a doctor. But each time she was asked to 'Seek another career option,' or told 'This might not be for you,' Kami shrugged off the naysayers and is now a champion of the University of Arizona College of Medicine's Pathway Scholars Program.

Now in its ninth year, the Pathway Scholars Program is a pipeline platform, preparing underrepresented students at the UArizona College of Medicine - Phoenix. The program is designed for students who have experienced adversity and have an interest in pursuing medicine, while giving them an academic support system on their journey.

Kami completed the program in May with 11 other students—the largest class yet—and said it was invaluable to her success as she begins looking ahead toward year two.

"I had gotten so many 'no's' from other medical schools, I wondered if I even deserved to be here," said Kami. "I think the only difference between regular, first-year medical students and Pathway students is you have a little bit of extra academic support to make sure you're doing okay in the courses."

The Arizona Community Foundation's Ellis Center for Educational Excellence made a three-year commitment to provide $306,000 in grants to nine Native American students through the Pathway Scholars Program. The funds will support three students per year for three years.

Racheal Mickel, Pathway Scholars Program Manager, said donors are a huge reason the program is so successful. "The truth is, there's an average $200,000 financial debt that medical students walk away with," said Racheal. "But what's amazing is, because of donors, we're able to host the program and the students pay very little in return."

With eight previous graduating classes, the Pathway Scholars Program has graduated 97.8% of its students through to the UArizona College of Medicine in Phoenix.

As she prepares for her second year of coursework, Kami is also making plans for her future. She nods to Arizona's diversity—something she's proud of and appreciates—and remembers back to the uneasiness of doctor visits for her and her siblings. Kami is looking forward to being a doctor who is both trusted and relatable.

"You feel more comfortable when you look across the room and see people who look like you or have come from similar backgrounds and can relate to you," said Kami. "Being a physician isn't based off your metrics; it's not based off your board exams. It's based off when you get in front of a patient, how well you can connect; how well you learn and understand what they're going through, and if you can relate to that."

COMMUNITY IMPACT
LOAN FUND / 2012

$19.3 million loaned / 23 projects supported
This fund invests in innovative community projects using familiar market instruments such as loans and loan guarantees made at below-market rates. Loans from this fund provide charitable capital that creates both social and financial impact.

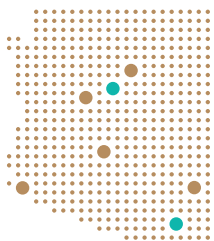

Leveraging philanthropic dollars through public-private partnerships—and recycling charitable capital. For more than 15 years, ACF has effectively utilized impact loans to support statewide communities, offering loans to qualified nonprofits, schools, and municipal organizations to assist them in completing essential projects that benefit Arizonans. Since the early 2000s, the three funds have distributed more than $28.2 million in loans.

ACF/USDA RURAL DEVELOPMENT INVESTMENT FUND / 2020

$2.4 million loaned / 4 projects supported

This fund assists rural communities with low-interest, short-term financing for infrastructure projects that USDA Rural Development has committed to funding. Loans from this fund benefit water systems, schools, affordable housing, firehouses, parks, museums, and related needs in rural communities.

A strong sense of community, more relaxed pace of life, and access to nature are some of the benefits often experienced when living outside of urban centers. However, the aspects that make rural living desirable can be a double-edged sword: living far from urban areas often means accessing critical resources is a challenge.

In Cochise County, mental health services are few and far between. School guidance counselors are especially rare, with some districts having one counselor serving multiple schools. Shaulee Curtis, a school counselor at the Benson Unified School District, is hoping to change that with the Counseling in the Streets project.

Counseling in the Streets trains teachers in small communities to support youth with mental health and emotional wellness techniques, provides them with a wellness program guide, and helps them organize and run wellness groups. Students also learn techniques for themselves, creating a multiplier effect with positive mental health practices.

As a champion of the work, Shaulee reflects on the impact this kind of peer-to-peer structure has had: "Our students are searching for help. They want it. They need it. But they don't often go out of their way to find it. Through this wellness program, which is provided to students in their own classrooms, a door opens up and students are able to receive the support and help they need through connection with their peers."

Funding from the Arizona Community Foundation of Cochise brought the program to 12 rural Cochise County schools, trained 15 facilitators, and reached more than 700 youth during the 2021-22 school year.

Stuck in America after graduating from Mingus Union High School in Cottonwood in May, Ukrainian foreign exchange student Sofii Halemska is having to grow up faster than most.

After the war broke out in Ukraine, Sofii tested her resilience, graduating from Mingus Union High and earning a four-year, full-ride scholarship to Augsburg University in Minneapolis. There, she will continue her education, and her life.

None of this would be possible, however, without meaningful connections and generosity from Cottonwood and Sedona-area community members.

"I hope a degree will help me get enough knowledge to go back to Ukraine, help rebuild everything, and help have better international relationships," said Sofii. "I feel like we live in the 21st century and we should use our language skills and not our fighting skills. People should talk to each other instead of using violence."

Thanks to area nonprofit The Sisterhood Connection, and various local donors, Sofii will fly out to orientation with $11,769 in her pocket. Not a dime ever crossed through the Arizona Community Foundation of Sedona's doors.

"Working with ACF helps me expand my network so I can integrate with other areas to make things happen," said Tom Coultas, advisory board member for The Sisterhood Connection. "The networking is really incredible."

Acting as a neutral convenor, Regional Director Jennifer Perry and her team were able to connect donors to a cause.

"If there's something that has to do with charitable giving, your first stop should be your local community foundation," said Jennifer. "Even if we can't help directly, we often have the opportunity to connect the players in the community to respond quickly and effectively."

ARIZONA ECONOMIC RECOVERY CENTER

Local First
Arizona helps build connections that benefit our communities.

Of all the systemic issues laid bare by the COVID-19 pandemic, one of the most critical for our communities is how we empower local nonprofit organizations to access funding that is essential for providing continuous service to individuals and families across the state.

The Arizona Economic Recovery Center, an extension of Local First Arizona, is a much-needed community resource enabling nonprofits, municipalities, and tribal organizations in Arizona to win competitive grants. The pool of nearly 75 professionals—ranging from assessors and strategic planners to grantwriters and reviewers—are deployed to ensure more federal, state, municipal, and foundation grant dollars are serving Arizona communities.

The initiative launched in 2021 with an $800,000 investment from collaborative partners, including the Arizona Community Foundation, Vitalyst Health Foundation, Freeport-McMoRan, Salt River Project, Arizona Complete Health, Arizona G&T Cooperatives, and the State of Arizona. In its first year, the Arizona Economic Recovery Center has leveraged more than $7.4 million in grants for communities across the state. And there's still $11 million pending.

One of more than 400 organizations that applied for assistance from the center was the TigerMountain Foundation. No stranger to the value of community partnerships, TigerMountain empowers people to help themselves by providing the space, education, and resources to grow healthy food, cook meals, compost kitchen scraps, and, most importantly, feel valued within their community.

Through the Arizona Economic Recovery Center, TigerMountain secured nearly $675,000 from the USDA Local Food Promotion Program, leading to two other USDA grants for soil and water conservation and urban agriculture.

These investments allow Founder and CEO Darren Chapman and his team to keep at-risk youth and adults in south Phoenix employed, empowered, and enthusiastic about getting their hands dirty in some of the few community gardens within this food desert. "We are grateful for our fruitful journey and bountiful learning experience together," said Darren.

Benefiting organizations like TigerMountain is the whole point of the Arizona Economic Recovery Center's existence. "It's about investing in a way that prevents people from falling into poverty in the first place," said Local First CEO Kimber Lanning. "That includes investing in entrepreneurship and systems change that enable families to build wealth. We're not just giving money to those who need it. We're fixing systems that cause people to not have their basic needs met."

SOCIAL VENTURE PARTNERS ARIZONA

OVERCOMING OBSTACLES

Facing organizational challenges, SVP Arizona leaned on their partnerships and board to reach new heights.

Since its founding by Jerry Hirsch in 1999, Social Venture Partners Arizona has taken a venture capital approach to philanthropy, providing expertise and funding to emerging and growing local nonprofits. Amy Armstrong became the CEO in 2019 and was soon faced with a series of challenges that tested the organization.

Amy was not dismayed. Instead, she viewed the challenges as opportunities to rebuild with purpose. Amy reflects, “Our team and partners rolled up our sleeves and got to work—having tough conversations and making hard decisions along the way.”

The goal wasn’t to just stay afloat but rather use the changing landscape as a means of revitalizing the resources and network SVP Arizona’s partners had come to rely upon. This shift in perspective proved to be a recipe for success.

As Amy explained, “Drilling down into our original mission allowed for a more strategic and focused SVP Arizona.” This pragmatic approach meant outfitting her staff with subject matter experts Michaela Wuycheck, Director of Investee Relations, and Heather Cracchiolo, Director of Partner Engagement. Together, with guidance and funding from longtime partners the Arizona Community Foundation and the Lodestar Foundation, SVP Arizona now finds itself stronger than ever.

The firm boasts a list of more than 100 partners, an astonishing tripling from when Amy first took the helm, with more milestones on the horizon. As SVP Arizona closes in on its 25th year, Amy is grateful, but knows even more work lies ahead.

“We are crossing the $5 million mark for funds granted and our engaged partners have given nearly 35,000 hours of their time and talent to local nonprofits,” said Amy. “This upcoming year we will be offering a record number of educational and partner events and it is my goal that we continue to deepen and expand our partnership in a way that reflects the Arizona community.”

While no one knows what new challenges tomorrow may bring, SVP Arizona makes a strong case that returning to one’s roots can be equal parts stabilizing and fruitful.

PAKIS FAMILY FOUNDATION CELEBRATES 25 YEARS

When Fred Pakis established his family foundation in 1996, his vision was to engage his family in the art of philanthropy. Since then, it has grown into so much more.

Fred's family continues to grow as he introduces future generations to the concept of philanthropic giving.

For many, philanthropy is something a person considers later in life. Fred Pakis' journey in philanthropy began much earlier than most and he wanted the same for his children. When he started the Pakis Family Foundation in 1996, his vision was to engage his family in the art of giving, with a focus on women and children's issues, job creation, and education. This multi-generational approach to philanthropy and the partnership his family has developed with the Arizona Community Foundation has proven to be a successful model for Fred's family, ACF, and the nonprofits that have benefited from the Pakis Family Foundation's grants.

Since inception, the Pakis Family Foundation has distributed 911 grants for a total of over $14.8 million. Celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, Fred reflected on some of the most impactful grants his family has recommended through their ACF supporting organization.

"As a businessman and former entrepreneur, it was natural to support startup and early-stage charities to help them succeed in their first years," said Fred. "One success story has been STEP (Student Expedition Program), a college prep and leadership program for low-income Arizona high schoolers. We've been a supporter for over 10 years and have watched them grow consistently every year with a 100% placement rate."

grants distributed since 1996—
for a total of over $14.8 million

In 2012, Fred also partnered with ACF to support the creation of the Pakis Center for Business Philanthropy to encourage Arizona companies to engage in charitable giving.

ACF has learned a lot from the Pakis Family Foundation's innovative approach to philanthropy. Fred values the partnership, saying, "As I look back on our 25-year relationship, ACF was always at our side supporting us as our philanthropy grew, matured, and inevitably changed. ACF's deep expertise and ties to the community really jump-started our impact and confidence and helped us as a family begin and grow our charitable tradition."

Fred also partnered with ACF to support the creation of the Pakis Center for Business Philanthropy. His vision for the Pakis Center was to encourage Arizona companies to engage in philanthropy with ACF, who could provide back-office support and other services. Established in 2012, the Pakis Center now has more than 55 corporate clients that have built customized portfolios of charitable funds, employee giving programs, competitive grant cycles, scholarships, and more.

Thanks to a partnership between the Arizona Community Foundation of Yavapai County and the national nonprofit organization Youth Advocate Programs, children and young adults in Yavapai County now have access to mentors who will support them in achieving their long-term plans while ensuring they have better and healthier futures.

Youth Advocate Programs received $25,000 from ACF of Yavapai County in 2021 to expand into the region. Since November of that year, the program has graduated 24 youth and families, with two more in the beginning stages. Volunteer mentors work with youth who have entered the juvenile criminal justice system.

The goal of the mentorship program is to reduce recidivism into both the juvenile and adult judicial systems. A cornerstone of the program's success is the transition away from system involvement.

"The program's biggest impact is seeing fewer numbers in juvenile probation," said ACF of Yavapai County Regional Director Lisa Sahady. "As a community, it helps reduce costs and produces productive members of society."

One of the greatest testaments to the program's success is that of 18-year-old Emarie, who had her life changed by the mentorship she received through Youth Advocate Programs. Just a year ago, Emarie was working to get off probation for an arrest that took place at her home. She battled through loneliness, parental relationship issues, and the increasing isolation of the pandemic world.

After being set up with a mentor, Emarie said she's not only out of trouble, but in good spirits with a clear path to move forward.

"I feel like I'm a lot happier and confident in who I am," said Emarie. "I feel like I know myself so much more. I really just found my soul."

As is common in rural communities, many students living in Graham and Greenlee counties don't attend preschool. The Center for American Progress reports that 60% of rural Americans live in 'childcare deserts'—places where there are three young children for every one childcare seat or simply no spots at all within a reasonable distance.

Five years ago, a group of teachers and administrators made strides to change that. Under the leadership of Paulette LeBlanc and Graham County School Superintendent Donna McGaughey and modeled after a rural Hawaii program, Kindergarten Summer Camp was born. With grant funding from the Arizona Community Foundation of the Gila Valley and First Things First, three schools offered the new program for the first time in 2017.

For two weeks during the summer, soon-to-be kindergartners spend a few hours each day in their future classroom learning basic skills like recognizing their name, knowing shapes and colors, acclimating to school routines, and more. Parent participation is a key component of the curriculum.

The impact of this multi-year funding has been far-reaching according to Duncan Elementary kindergarten teacher Melanie Hilton. When the program was halted due to COVID-19, Melanie had to spend a great deal of energy at the beginning of the year teaching kids how to conduct themselves in school.

In the years where it has been implemented, Melanie noticed that students in the program were able to teach their counterparts some of what they learned. This past year, 15% of the participants recognized their names on the first day but by the end, all knew their names in written form.

Kindergarten Summer Camps have served students in the communities of Duncan, Pima, Solomon, and Bylas.

Investigative Reporting

FOSTER YOUTH / 2016

$415,000 to The Arizona Republic / $552,935 to Morrison Institute

Along with research, data analysis, and dozens of articles that examined the systems meant to support foster children, investigate case increases, and seek solutions; the three-year grant supported the production of They Have Names, a documentary film that told the stories of foster youth and those who care for them.

ACF makes strategic investments in investigative reporting to build local newsrooms' capacity, typically alongside investments in ASU's Morrison Institute for Public Policy to ground these stories in research on topics that are impacting our communities. This approach brings together in-depth research, analysis, and public outreach. In the last six years, ACF has partnered with The Arizona Republic and the Morrison Institute to provide more than $1.7 million in support of investigative reporting.

AFFORDABLE HOUSING / 2020

$400,000 to The Arizona Republic / $400,000 to Morrison Institute

To date this co-investment has yielded dozens of articles and several research reports that address the housing insecurity challenges that many Arizonans are experiencing. Alongside the reports and reporting, events are being held in communities across the state to bring light to this important issue.

THE POWER OF ENDOWMENT:

DOROTHY H. AYRES FUND

In 1996, the Dorothy H. Ayres Fund was established at the Arizona Community Foundation from an initial charitable gift valued just over $400,000. Twenty-six years later, the fund has grown to $473,318 while distributing over $543,000 to organizations focused on animal welfare.

Dorothy's vision was to make an impact on those improving the general well-being of animals, expanding public education on animal rights, and providing rehabilitation and rescue services to wildlife and pets. The Arizona Animal Welfare League & SPCA, Yavapai Humane Society, Tucson Audubon Society, Fearless Kitty Rescue, Liberty Wildlife Rehabilitation Foundation, and the Grand Canyon National Park Foundation are just some of the nonprofits that have received grants from the endowed fund.

This growth and impact illustrate the power of endowment.

Animals and those who work closely with them have been and will continue to be positively impacted by Dorothy's foresight and philanthropic spirit.

A close-up photograph of a sunflower with a teal overlay. The sunflower is in the lower half of the frame, and its head is the central focus. The leaves and other flower heads are visible in the background, creating a layered effect. The teal color is a solid, medium-saturated shade that covers the entire image.

We are Arizonans and this is our community foundation.

Philanthropy is both art and science and must be guided by the heart and the mind. It is the bright thread that ties communities together. In my 13 years as steward of the Arizona Community Foundation, I have seen this duality play out with donors as they ceaselessly balance their hearts and minds while making philanthropic choices. There is no right or wrong here, and it's perfectly acceptable to be biased toward the art over the science, or vice versa. But running through it all is a deep sense of caring for others and an unyielding desire to simply make the normal course of life in our communities better. That is an ideal I hope and believe will span future generations of Arizona philanthropists.

It has been a privilege to lead the Arizona Community Foundation and support the visions of so many. While I've always felt a sense of ownership for the decisions I have made and the work I have done, I always knew my job was to steward the foundation well, collaborate with everyone I could, make it better than I found it, and turn ACF over in the best condition possible for the next steward—another community leader who will take it to other great places before passing it on. After all, ACF is the community's foundation. It belongs to you, the community members who entrust it with your legacies and count on it to make our communities better for all.

As I plan my departure, I know ACF is on an amazing trajectory and is in the best position ever to have such incredible impact on the new challenges facing Arizonans and this great state. Thank you for your unwavering support during my time with ACF—and for your continued support during the journey ahead.

Sincerely,
